INBETWEENERS beauty Emily Attack looks all grown-up in a short leather skirt.

Emily, 21, played Charlotte "Big Jugs" Hinchcliffe, who had a brief fling on the E4 comedy with frustrated schoolboy Will McKenzie (Simon Bird), below.

But nerdy Will was nowhere to be seen when the former Dancing on Ice star stepped out with her actress sister Martha, 20.

They went to see their singer-songwriter mum Kate Robbins perform at The 100 Club in Central London.

The Inbetweeners movie, in which the lads go on holiday to Crete, is being filmed and due for release this summer.

BARE BACKSIDE BAN

tvbiz EXCLUSIVE

By COLIN ROBERTSON

DOCTOR Who star Matt Smith was banned from baring his bum while filming a new show about a gay writer.

BBC chiefs feared it would tarnish Matt's image in the sci-fi show, below, so he had to keep his rear hidden.

Matt, 28, plays Brit novelist Christopher Isherwood in the drama, which features gay sex, male nudity and sado-masochism.

The one-off programme tells of Isherwood's life in the decadent gay sub-culture of Berlin in the early 1930s.

Viewers will see Matt snogging a rent boy (Alexander Doetsch) and romping before falling for street cleaner Heinz (Douglas Booth). Toby Jones – who plays Isherwood's gay neighbour Gerald Hamilton – is seen being flogged by a man in a wicker mask. It's all a far cry from the Tardis and Daleks.

A BBC source said: "Doctor Who is a firm family favourite, so we thought it would be better if we didn't show Matt's behind in his new drama."

As for filming the near-nude scenes, Matt said: "You've just got to commit to it, gung-ho."

"Doing nude scenes with a boy is different from with a girl, as you can imagine."

"Having to kiss boys, and finally understanding the nature of stubble rash, was interesting."

● CHRISTOPHER And His Kind is on Saturday, March 19, at 9.30pm on BBC2.
